This week in Rotary History: The founding of the first Rotary Club, February 23, 1905, in Chicago.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The District Governor Mark Felgel will meet with our Club on August 30, 2006. He will meet with the Club President at 9:00 a.m. and the Board Members at 10:00 a.m. He will be our luncheon speaker on that day.

ROTARY HISTORY

Thursday, 23 February 1905, is the most significant date in the history of Rotary – perhaps in the history of volunteerism. As the day broke, there was little evidence of its significance, however. The Chicago newspapers led with headlines announcing President Theodore Roosevelt's (former Rotarian) initiative to broker a peace between Russia and Japan. The carpenters' and bricklayers' union in Chicago were threatening to strike unless their members were granted a half-day off on Saturdays. Late that afternoon, Paul and Silvester met at Madame Galli's for dinner and discussed the idea of the fellowship and business booster club. A few days earlier they had talked about it with a mutual customer, a mining engineer named Gustavus Loehr, and he was so enthusiastic about it that he offered to host the organizational meeting in his office.

After dinner, Paul and Silvester walked over to Gus' office on the seventh floor of the Unity Building at 127 Dearborn Street. It was a small room, not well lighted, with a desk and three or four uncomfortable chairs, a coat rack in the corner, and an engineering chart on the wall.

Gus was waiting with his friend Hiram Shorey, a merchant tailor he had invited to the meeting. Loehr did not have a conference room, so the four of us pulled up chairs and sat around the desk in his office.

They each introduced themselves, telling the others about their vocations and sketching out their backgrounds that led them by remarkably similar paths to Chicago. Silvester told of his German heritage and of his life growing up on an Indiana farm. He showed them pictures of his family around the fireplace in their log cabin; of the hardships they endured, with snow that often blew so heavily through the broken roof that he would awaken to find a drift on the floor beside his bed.
